“Canberra Doctor” magazine is published by the Australian Medical Association ACT Ltd and has been in production continually since 1988. It is the vehicle for informing the medical profession, and stimulating debate on matters of concern.

“Canberra Doctor” is the only local regular and monthly medical publication – by doctors, for doctors – and enjoys a niche market. “Canberra Doctor” magazine is distributed at no cost to all doctors in the ACT and surrounding areas of NSW. Other recipients include medical students, health policy makers and administrators in the Federal and ACT governments. It is well received by the profession and read with interest by local politicians and senior bureaucrats.

10 editions a year are published from February to the December edition.

INFORMATION FOR CONTRIBUTORS

“Canberra Doctor” has a general policy of publishing local contributions from medical practitioners and medical students. In general terms articles should be in word (doc). References will not be included, other than to say that they are available on request. Contributions should be between 750-1000 words, but some flexibility on length will be given if the subject matter warrants.

Articles may be submitted to the editorial committee for consideration. If the committee believes that the article is too long, or needs editing, it will be sent back to the author with an invitation to resubmit.

Authors and co-authors need to be identified and an email address and phone number should be supplied. The latter two are not for publication. Photos are recommended including of the author and authors.

When an article is co-authored, all contributors must agree to the publication of the article and a statement to this effect is required.
