CALLING ALL MEDICAL PRACTITIONERS

Let us know your thoughts on antibiotic use and antibiotic resistance

The University of Sydney invites medical practitioners to participate in an online survey on antibiotic use and resistance in Australia. The survey explores antibiotic prescribing decisions, antibiotic resistance and where practitioners source their information. The findings from this study will assist national policy-makers in revising and enhancing national policy and education interventions about antibiotic use and antibiotic resistance in Australia.

It takes about 15-20 minutes to complete and your responses are anonymous and confidential. Take part for the chance to win an iPad.

Your thoughts are important. Participate now at:
<https://www.surveymonkey.com/r/researchab>

For further information, please contact Dale Dominey-Howes at the University of Sydney. Email: dale.dominey-howes@sydney.edu.au Tel: +61 2 9351 6641

AMA kicks off 2016 Safe Hours Audit

Few occupations are as susceptible to the dangers posed by fatigue as those in the medical profession. Yet dangerous work practices caused by unsafe and over-long hours, particularly in public hospitals, continue to be seen as acceptable.

The AMA has long said that fatigue and medicine do not mix, launching its Safe Hours campaign in 1999 to address the impact of fatigue on doctors and patient safety.

2016 sees the AMA conduct its fourth Safe Hours Audit, covering the period of 31 October to 6 November. These audits have been an integral part of the AMA's Safe Hours campaign since its inception.
